Cows, Cows, Everywhere a Cow

The next time you're on a long, boring car trip, why not look at cows? All cows are not alike. In the United States, there are 52 different breeds of cows.

A cow's color and patterns will help you tell one breed from another. The Holstein, for example, is a white cow with large black blobs of color all over its body. Then there's the Ayrshire, which is a white cow covered with red spots. The Black Baldy is almost all black, but it sometimes has a white face or white feet.

Another way to tell the different breeds apart is by unusual features. The Brahman, for example, has a large hump and ears that hang downward. If you happen to see a gigantic cow, it probably belongs to the Chianina breed. This all-white cow is the largest in the world. The Highland, on the other hand, is a very small cow. You'll recognize this breed right away because it has long horns and very shaggy hair.

If you actually get out of the car and walk up to a cow, you will notice other differences. The Guernsey has yellow ears. The Pinzgauer is orange around the eyes. And the Dutch Belted has a black tongue. But maybe you don't want to get close enough to know!

(Cited from Brain Quest)

18. What is the Holstein cow like?

1. It is like many breeds of cows.
2. It is white with large black blobs of color.
3. It has red spots.

20. Which breed of cow has the opposite unusual feature to the Chianina breed?

1. The Brahman
2. The Pinzgauer
3. The Guernsey
4. The Ayrshire
5. The Highland

21. What is the main idea of the first paragraph?

1. A long car trip is boring.
2. All cows are not alike.
3. All cows are from 52 different breeds.
4. Looking at cows during the car trip
5. There are many breeds of cows in the United States.

How Day and Night Came to Be

When the world was very young, there was only darkness. Ice covered the land. Two children, a boy and a girl, lived in a small cabin. They hunted for food. It was hard work. It was tiring work. There was no time to play.

One day, a stranger came to the door. He was part man, part raven. He asked the children to come out and play. The children were too tired to play. They offered the Raven Man food and drink.

"No, thank you," said the Raven Man. "But if you can solve this puzzle, I will reward you." He gave them a small bag and left.

In the bag were many small fish bones. By the pale light of a small lamp, the children arranged the bones into the shape of the fish. They solved the Raven Man's puzzle.

Their reward was a fishing spear. The sharp barbs on the spear made hunting easier. Then the Raven Man gave the children a second puzzle of bones. The children put the pieces together to make the flipper of a seal. Again, the Raven Man rewarded them.

The Raven Man's second gift was an oil lamp, large enough for cooking and heating. With each gift, the Raven Man made life a little easier for the children. Then, the Raven Man took out a ball. He said, "Now, let's play."

Outside in the freezing darkness, the children and the Raven Man played catch. Suddenly, the ball caught on the Raven Man's sharp beak. The ball ripped open. Through the tear, the sun escaped and lit the sky. For the first time, the world felt the warmth of sunshine.

And that is how they was created out of night.
