Communication

There are many ways of communicating without using speech. Signals, signs, symbols, and gestures may be found in every known culture. The basic function of a signal is to impinge upon the environment in such a way that it attracts attention, for example, the dots and dashes of a telegraph circuit. Coded to refer to speech, the potential for communication is very great. While less adaptable to the codification of words, signs contain greater meaning in and of themselves. A stop sign or a barber pole conveys meaning quickly and conveniently.

Symbols are more difficult to describe than either signals or signs because of their intricate relationship with the receiver's cultural perceptions. In some cultures, applauding in a theater provides performers with an auditory symbol of approval. Gestures such as waving and handshaking also communicate certain cultural messages.

16. What is the main topic of the passage?

1. The basic function of a signal
2. Communication with using speech
3. Cultural signs, symbols, and gestures
4. Various ways of communication
5. Communication and Codification

17. Which of the following is true about symbols?

1. Symbols have the same meanings around the world.
2. Symbols are as simple as signals or signs.
3. Symbols are related to the receiver's culture.
4. Symbols are the most difficult to understand.
5. Symbols are described as either signals or signs.

18. The word "adaptable" in line 5 is closest in meaning to_____.

1. additional
2. admirable
3. applicable
4. adoptable
5. adjustable

19. Applauding was considered as an example of_____.

1. a symbol
2. a sign
3. a gesture
4. a signal
5. a word

20. Based on the passage, what is the conclusion of signals, signs, symbols, and gestures?

1. People use them in the same way.
2. They are forms of communication.
3. Only some cultures have signals, signs, and symbols.
4. They are all easy to understand.
5. People use them for codification.

April Fools

If you've ever been pranked on April Fools' Day, you may wonder how this tradition started. Well, you're not alone. No one knows for sure how April Fools' Day began. But the most likely explanation has to do with the calendar.

No, that's not an April Fools' Day joke. People used to celebrate New Years Day on April 1 . Just like today, people would have big parties to celebrate. Over time, the calendar changed and so did the date for New Years. In the 1500s, the new calendar marked New Years Day as January 1st. But because there was no Internet or other means to spread the word, the news traveled slowly by word of mouth. It took a while for everyone to hear about the change, and even then some people resisted it. They continued to celebrate New Years on April 1st. These people were given the nickname "April fools".

People following the new calendar played tricks on the "April fools" by sending them on "fool's errands". They had the "April fools" deliver invitations to big New Year's celebrations that weren't really going to happen. In France, "April fools" were called "Poisson d'Avril", which is French for "April Fish". This began because people thought fish were easy to catch since they could be fooled into taking the bait on a hook. Children would tag a paper fish on a person's back to mark them as an "April Fish". When the person discovered the fish, the prankster would yell "Poisson d'Avril"

Not everyone is convinced that this is actually how the tradition of April Fools' Day began. People have tried to pinpoint the exact date of the first April Fool's Day, but this only led to more pranks. A professor from Boston University pranked a reporter by making up a story about a court jester who said he could run the empire better than the king. The jester was 22 made king for a day on April 1st. This turned out to be a big April Fools' Day trick because the reporter thought the story was real.

Even though we aren't sure how this tradition began, people still celebrate April Fools' Day by playing tricks on each other. So the next time you prank someone and yell "April Fools!" remember that the day may actually be about the people who didn't want to change their traditions when the new calendar was adopted. Or maybe it's just a day to celebrate the joker in all of us.
