The Work of a Physician

Being a physician is one of the most challenging yet rewarding professions in the world. Physicians, often referred to as doctors, are responsible for diagnosing illnesses, treating patients, and advising them on maintaining good health. They work in a variety of settings, such as hospitals, clinics, or private practices, and their daily responsibilities can vary depending on their specialty.

Dr. Anjali Mehta, a pediatrician, spends her days caring for children. Her mornings are typically filled with wellness checkups, where she examines children, discusses their growth with parents, and administers vaccinations. In the afternoons, she sees children with fevers, coughs, and other symptoms. Dr. Mehta says her greatest challenge is earning the trust of her young patients, but she always manages to make them smile with kind words and funny jokes.

Physicians must stay updated with the latest medical advancements. Dr. Mehta attends conferences, participates in workshops, and reads medical research to ensure she can deliver the best practice. Despite her busy schedule, she says the most satisfying part of her task is seeing her patients get better. “Knowing I can make a difference in someone’s life motivates me every day,” she explains.

Becoming a physician needs years of education and training. After completing high school, future doctors must attend college, medical school, and a residency program. While the journey is long and demanding, most physicians, like Dr. Mehta, believe it is worth it. Their work not only saves lives but also brings comfort and hope to families.

11. What is one of the main responsibilities of a physician?
1. To write medical textbooks 2. To advise patients on maintaining good health
3. To train new medical students 4. To diagnose medicine
5. To administer medicine in emergency situations

12. What does Dr. Mehta find most satisfying about her job?
1. Attending medical conferences 2. Earning the trust of young patients
3. Seeing the patients recover 4. Administering vaccinations
5. Knowing a difference in someone’s life

13. Why is it important for physicians to stay updated with medical advancements?
1. To earn more money 2. To provide the best possible care
3. To reduce their working hours 4. To become famous in their field
5. To satisfy the job

14. What does the passage suggest about becoming a physician?
1. It is a short and easy process. 2. It requires dedication and years of training.
3. It can only be done in hospitals. 4. It brings comfort to life.
5. It does not involve interacting with patients.

The Value of Loyalty

Loyalty is one of the most admired qualities a person can possess. It means being steadfast, trustworthy, and supportive to someone or something you care about, even during difficult times. Loyalty can be shown in many ways—toward family, friends, a team, or even a cause. It reflects a deep sense of commitment and responsibility.

One famous example of loyalty is the story of Hachiko, a dog in Japan. Hachiko would wait every evening at the train station for his owner, Professor Ueno, to return from work. One day, the professor suddenly passed away at work and never came home. Despite this, Hachiko continued to wait at the station every day for nine years, until he himself passed away. His unwavering loyalty touched the hearts of many, and a statue was built in his honor.

Loyalty is not always easy to maintain. It often requires sacrifice and patience. For example, a loyal friend might stand by you when others do not. A loyal team member will keep working hard, even when the odds of winning seem slim. In return, loyalty can create strong, lasting bonds of trust and respect.

Being loyal does not mean ignoring what is right or blindly following others. True loyalty is based on values like honesty and integrity. It means standing by what you believe in while supporting the people and causes you care about. Loyalty, when paired with these values, is a foundation for meaningful relationships and communities.

15. What is the main idea of the passage?

1. Loyalty is about being honest and kind.
2. Loyalty is only important in friendships.
3. Loyalty is about always following others.
4. Loyalty is only for family and friends.
5. Loyalty is an admirable quality that requires commitment and patience.

16. What does the story of Hachiko teach us?

1. Loyalty is only shown by animals.
2. Loyalty is easy when times are good.
3. Loyalty should only be shown to family.
4. Loyalty can always wait.
5. Loyalty can touch the hearts of others and inspire them.

17. What is the difference between true loyalty and blind loyalty?

1. True loyalty is based on values like honesty, while blind loyalty is not.
2. Blind loyalty is always better than true loyalty.
3. True loyalty involves ignoring what is right.
4. Blind loyalty builds stronger relationships than true loyalty.
5. True loyalty is only for family, while blind loyalty is for friends and others.

The River's Journey

The river flows, a silver thread,
Through valleys green and mountain bed.
It twists and turns, it leaps and falls,
A voice that whispers, a voice that calls.

It carries secrets from far away,
Through night's cool hush and the bright of day.
Its waters gleam beneath the sun,
A journey long, yet never done.

The river meets the ocean wide,
Where currents dance and dreams collide.
Yet still it dreams of paths unknown,
Forever carving a tale its own.

18. What is the main theme of the poem?

1. The beauty of mountains
2. The endless journey of a river
3. The dangers of the ocean
4. The quiet of the night
5. The journey of the nature

19. How does the poet describe the river's movement?

1. Slow and steady
2. Twisting, turning, leaping, and falling
3. Standing still in the valley
4. Calm and silent
5. Flows and thread

20. What does the phrase "Forever carving a tale its own" suggest?

1. The river never stops moving and creates its own story.
2. The river stays in one place to tell its story.
3. The river's story ends when it meets the ocean.
4. The river only flows during the daytime.
5. The river will flow by its own.

The Wonders of Biology

Biology is a fascinating branch of science that explores the complexities of life. It helps us understand how living organisms function, adapt, and interact with their surroundings. From the tiniest bacteria to the largest whales, biology teaches us about the diversity of life on Earth and how everything is interconnected.

One key area of biology is cellular biology, the study of cells. Cells are the building blocks of all living things. Each cell has a specific role, such as providing energy, creating proteins, or supporting growth. Scientists have discovered that cells communicate with each other through chemical signals, allowing the body to work as a unified system.

Another important topic in biology is evolution. Evolution explains how species change over time to adapt to their environment. For instance, giraffes evolved long necks to reach leaves high in trees, and some birds developed strong beaks to crack open nuts. These adaptations are crucial for survival.

Biology also plays a vital role in solving global challenges. By studying ecosystems, biologists help protect endangered species and preserve biodiversity. They also study diseases to develop new treatments and vaccines. With the help of biology, we can create a healthier and more sustainable future for our planet.

21. What is biology mainly about?

1. Studying the stars and planets
2. Exploring rocks and minerals
3. Building machines
4. Studying about living organisms
5. A branch of science

22. What do cells do in living organisms?

1. They only provide energy.
2. They fight against bacteria.
3. They make up only plants.
4. They are building blocks.
5. They communicate, grow, and perform specific functions

23. How does evolution help species survive?

1. By teaching animals how to communicate
2. By creating new species instantly
3. By developing the environment
4. By helping species avoid extinction
5. By allowing species to adapt over time

24. What is one example of how biology solves global challenges?
1. Creating stronger metals
2. Studying diseases to develop treatments
3. Teaching people how to build houses
4. Finding new ways to explore the moon
5. Adapting to the environment

25. Why is biodiversity important, according to the passage?
1. It makes life more interesting for scientists.
2. It develop new treatments and vaccines.
3. It helps plants grow faster.
4. It is only needed to study evolution.
5. It ensures the survival of ecosystems and species.
